R activation leads to mobilization of CD8α^+^ dendritic cells to the center of infection, leading to division of the microbiota target population. The latter exhibit concomitant increase in primary and secondary protective anti-rotavirus and anti-Salmonella responses. 3.2. Balance of gastric homeostasis and inflammatory responses is reflected in epithelial functions, and the way stress stimulates these is histamine-dependent {#cam42389-sec-0019}

--- To analyze epithelial functional changes in fasted and fed mice following RepeATP stimulation and Salmonella colonization, we examined the expression of Ki67, colocalization of Ki67 and caspase 3, and Coomassie staining of H^+^/K^+^ ATPase pump function. Ki67 expression in epithelial cells decreased in fasted mice, and was lost in mice challenged with bacteria and RepeATP. Ki67 returned to baseline in fed mice upon RepeATP stimulation. Similar loss of Ki67 in response to bacteria was found in epithelial cells from ileum but not in duodenum (Figure 4{ref-type="fig"}A-C). Caspase 3 activity increased with Salmonella colonization in fasted mice. The increase was diminished by RepeATP and was accentuated in fed mice upon RepeATP stimulation (Figure 4{ref-type="fig"}D-E). Inclusion of histamine in the assay increased caspase activity. ![RepeATP-induced gastric inflammation recapitulates the mucosal epithelial response to the metabolic implications of starvation. Percentage of Ki67^+^ cells was assessed in top row graphs (bars) and colocalization of Ki67 with caspase 3 in five representative slides from each group of three mice (yellow arrows in middle row); nuclei are stained with DAPI; the final slide (bottom row) was stained with Coomassie. A-D: in A and B, the upper bars of the graphs represent the onset of the mouse challenge experiments in fasted or fasted with histamine (10 μg/mouse: λ-phos: 10 nmol ATP + 10 nmol λ-phos per mouse), and
